LABOR'S CRISIS.

In the midst of unprecedented prosperity, marvelous growth, increasing influence, concessions and benefits, is labor nearing a crisis involving defeat and loss of much that it has gained? Is it, like Humpty Dumpty on the wall, to take a fall because of indiscretion or deliberate disregard for reason and justice? There are indications of it. Elated by success, following theorists and unwise advisers, labor unions in some sections show a disposition to attempt the role of dictator of industries and business, regardless of right or consequences, to the annoyance of the public, detriment of trade and loss to every one, labor included—because some one's pet theory does not materialize. This will not be tolerated even in the name of labor, and can only cause turmoil, trouble, possibly bloodshed, resulting finally in the overthrow of those who attempt it.

Labor has no more rights than capital, the employe than the employer. Workingmen because organized are not privileged. Organized labor will not be allowed to become an oligarchy any more than organized capital. Each has its rights and its obligations as well, not only to each other, but to the whole people. A trespass of right, a disregard for obligation, is a wrong not only to the rival interest, but to the community. The American people sympathize with, and are favorably disposed toward labor, but the American people are sticklers for justice and liberty to all, regardless of class or condition, and will not brook trenching upon the rights of capital any more than of labor, upon the employer than the employe, nor interference with the country's business and peace by any class.

Labor unions have a proper purpose and defined methods within reason and justice for attaining those objects. Adherence to those objects and methods has won popular approval and success. But there is a tendency to expand these objects and methods beyond the purpose of obtaining justice for labor in a legitimate way, to seek by force of numbers and presumed importance to arrogantly control all industry and commerce, and that with an utter disregard for the rights, interests, welfare or peace of all others, or even ultimately of labor. Reason and equity for the time being give way to hallucination and bullying. Without regard for or consideration of conditions, business requirements, interests, contracts, feasibility, propriety or anything else, labor presents demands, presents ultimatums, then with a hubbalooboo strikes and boycotts. Assuming the role of a bandit, it levies its tribute and holds up employers and business community till its demands are granted and its edicts obeyed.

Thus in Greater New York, because every demand of the various labor unions, many of them clearly impracticable and unjust, are not promptly granted, a system of sympathetic strikes is in vogue, paralyzing all building trades, causing general idleness of labor and suspension of business till, it is estimated, 165,000 workmen are out, with the prospect the number may reach a million, though only a very small proportion of labor is directly involved, a few employers really opposed to labor's requests, and the community its friend. All labor, all employers and the entire population of New York are made to suffer. What the advocates and promoters of such a policy expect to gain for labor other than disaster is hard to discern.

And right here at home was a similar case. A union man comes to the city, obtains employment, but does not deposit his card with the local union—clearly a matter between him and his union, for which no one else is responsible, and which certainly no one else can settle. The local union boycotts the employer. The employer contracts with a union brickmaker employing union labor for 100,000 brick; the union notifies the union brickmaker not to furnish the brick under penalty of having his employes strike and his brick boycotted by union labor. He gives up the contract. The brick are purchased elsewhere; the union brickmaker loses the profit on the contract, his union workmen are deprived of the labor of making 100,000 brick, but the recalcitrant union man did not deposit his card and retains his job. What has union labor gained by it? Certainly nothing to its credit or benefit.

These are merely instances for illustration. It is altogether too prevalent in industrial circles. It is rendering organized labor a disturber, a nuisance, a menace, a plunderer, a destroyer—everything but what it is intended and expected to be, with a result to labor that must be a curtailing of its power for evil, if not for everything.

It is high time that the conservative, well meaning and sensible workingmen, whose only desire is that labor be accorded fair treatment and pay; who respect right and contracts and the public interests, the law and decency; it is time that those men, whose sacrifices of time, energy and privation have built up organized labor, to come to the front and put a bridle on the so-called "progressives," whose rule is bringing union labor into disrepute, and whose course can have but one end—destruction. Workingmen generally do not approve of such procedure, and as it is the action of their leaders and in their name, it is for them to stop it. Bring the vigorous leaders into the line of order and right, as per union principles, or have them step down, and pursue their peculiar ideas of labor reform on their own responsibility. Organized labor does not approve such conduct, although organized labor is being used and made to suffer for it.

The Kentucky Irish American welcomes the delegates to the State Federation of Catholic Societies to Louisville. The delegates will meet here on Tuesday. Every Catholic citizen of the city and State should support this movement. Their motto should be the motto of Kentucky: "United we stand; divided we fall."

The dispatches reported a "night of terror" and an attack on the militia guarding the jail at Jackson, Breathitt county, Wednesday night. But the only casualty was a cow. Can it be that the stupid bovine, disregarding the sentry's "halt" and being fired upon, caused all the commotion?

That "special Rome correspondent" of the Catholic Citizen reports too much on "reliable information" that proves to be mere guess; at any rate, not true. Those "special Rome correspondents," as a rule, are utterly unreliable so far as church matters are concerned, and it is about time that editors of Catholic papers, at least, were getting on to the fact. Besides, it is not creditable to an American Catholic paper to accept as correct reports of Catholic matters in this country, right under his nose, via a "special Rome correspondent." A Catholic editor ought to know as much about American affairs as does the "special Rome correspondent," and considerably more than the latter professed to know.

IRISH FIELD DAY

To Be Observed by Members of the Ancient Order and Their Friends.

The special committee appointed by the County Board of the Ancient Order of Hibernians has decided to hold an Irish field day. Fern Grove is the place and August 23 is the day. The special committee so decided, and the decision of these members meets with the approval of the County Board. The committee was made up of Mike Tynan, Pat Welsh, John J. Sullivan and Joe McGinn. These gentlemen have decided in favor of an Irish field day. They have also decided that Fern Grove was the best place to hold it and that August 23 was the most opportune time.

Those who attended the Irish field day last year will bear witness that it was a success in every particular. And yet the promoters of the enterprise were new at the business.

This year they can not complain of inexperience and are prepared for a real athletic contest. Within a few days the Irish-American athletes, young and old, will be in training for the field games.

CATHOLIC KNIGHTS

Will Make Splendid Showing Second Sunday in June.

All arrangements are completed for the annual parade and visitation of the Catholic Knights of America, which have been set for Sunday, June 14. The various branches will assemble at St. Mary's on Eighth street with the State officers and Central Committee, and from there march to St. Boniface church, where all will attend solemn vespers. The new banner of the Central Committee is here and will be carried that day for the first time. It is urged that each branch turn out in full strength. The procession will move at 2 o'clock sharp.

Tonight the special committee having in charge arrangements for the annual excursion will meet at the office of Newton G. Rogers, Fifth and Court Place, to hear reports. Cannelton seems to be the place most in favor, as the citizens of that town would prepare a warm welcome for the Knights and their friends.

WINNING LIFE'S BATTLE TOGETHER.

It is a great thing for husband and wife to win the battle together, to have the same aims and to be in mutual sympathy at the same time. When a man begins life poor, with a debt as his legacy and his younger brothers and sisters as his care, it is the woman's place to help him economize, not to claim every dollar for herself as fast as he earns it nor to make his burden heavier by needless extravagance and use of credit.

When he desires to rise in the world, whether he be struggling for an education or entering upon a public career, she should not hold him back by her lack of ambition nor drag him down by her moral weaknesses, but bravely and cordially say: "I am going along with you." Discouragement only requires him to stop how he can overcome the objections raised to postpone his plans or to fall behind in the race when he should be pressing on toward the mark of his high aspiration.

But if this should be said as a caution, how much should be said in gratitude? No one could even tell what is due to those wonderful women who in this aspiring age have done their duty to the fullest, those generous and loyal souls who have waited through the long years of preparation and hardship, when the indications of ability in their husbands have been so slight as to cause distrust among their friends; who have managed the household, worked in the factory or the store, spoken on the lecture platform or written for the press and made sacrifices unnumbered and unknown. All praise to these, the angels of success. No crown too rich with love's bright jewels for their exceeding great reward!

"STOLEN."

"How dear to my heart is the steady subscriber who pays in advance at the birth of the year; who lays down his money, and does it quite gladly, and casts round the office a halo of cheer. He never says, 'Stop it. I can not afford it,' nor 'I'm getting more papers now than I can read;' but always says, 'Send it; the family likes it; in fact, we all think it a real household need.' How welcome he is when he steps into the sanctum, how he makes our heart throb, how he makes our hearts dance! We outwardly thank him, we inwardly bless him, the steady subscriber who pays in advance."

SPEAKER SPOKE

And Then He Quit Speaking For a Very Short While.

Ben Speaker, who has been for years before the public as a member of the Old Hickory Quartet, Catholic Knights of America, and everything else that is good, had a new experience this week. He went frog hunting. Frogs were not on hand that night, but he caught everything else, from damp feet to a bad cold in the head.

"You see," Ben said to a representative of the Kentucky Irish American, "I want to tell this story to the people myself. I want to tell it to them all at once, not in the installment plan. I believe in getting the people together and giving it to them. In other words, I'm in favor of federation. It was this way: I federated with several other fellows who said they knew where to find the frogs. Now I've belonged to nearly everything that is going except the Ancient Order of Hibernians. I figured it out that if I could walk in with a lot of frogs with green backs and white and gold fronts I would be just what the doctor ordered."

"They told me to get a piece of red flannel for bait. I sized that up as all right, because if anything will make an Irishman fight it is a red flag. I got the red flannel and a lantern and we started out. We walked three miles before we got to the creek where the frogs were supposed to be. Then our trouble began. There was no boulevard alongside that creek. We just lit where we fell, and I believe I fell twice as often as we lit. Well, as I was going to tell you—now, here! you're laughing. I'm not going to finish telling you this story now, because you're going to print it. You'll just have to wait until I tell it all at the Catholic Federation meeting next Tuesday night."

OFFICER BURKE RECOVERING.

Officer Dave Burke, of the mounted police, is about fully recovered from his accident of last Saturday, having sprained his ankle while alighting from a car. Dave's many friends in the Sixth police district are endeavoring to have him assigned there again, he having been removed lately to the western part of the city.

COLD MEAT HASH.

This is a sort of glorified hash, and is sure to be appreciated. Heat half an ounce of butter or good dripping in a saucepan, and fry in it one tablespoonful of finely chopped onion till a golden brown. Draw the pan from the fire and add half a breakfastcupful of fine bread crumbs, a full cup of meat chopped very fine, half a teaspoonful of salt, a little pepper and nutmeg, half a breakfastcupful of white sauce, and a teaspoonful of lemon juice. Heat over the fire and take up just before it boils, and serve on croquettes on bread. These are rounds of bread fried till crisp in butter or dripping. Garnish with parsley and serve. Baked potatoes served with this are a great improvement.
